Detroit, Mich., Aug. 7. — Wallace Brothers circus trains, running in two sections over the Grand Trunk road, were wrecked a half mile east of Durand, Mich., at 3:45 this morning and 22 persons were killed and 70 injured. The list of dead in part follows: A. W. Large, special agent for the Grand Trunk, with headquarters at Battle Creek; J. W. McCarty, Grand Trunk trainmaster; John Purcell, Peru, Ind., showman; Lars Larson, Cambridge, O., showman; C. Thomas, home unknown, showman; John Leary, Springfield, Ill., showman; Andrew Haviland, New York, showman; Frank Thorpe, Dundee, Mich., showman; Robert Wright, home unknown, showman; George Smith, home unknown, showman; Charles Sando, Peru Ind., showman; Joseph Wilson, Pittsburg, showman.

James W. Foley, special agent of the Grand Trunk, is reported to be dying.

Dr. B. P. Broule, chief surgeon of the Grand Trunk and a corps of Detroit surgeons left Detroit on an early train for the scene of the wreck.

The trains were running from Charlotte where the circus exhibited last night to Lapere. The two sections were running about half an hour apart. The first section was standing on the main track near this city when the second section crashed into it. The engineer of the second section said he was unable to stop his train, when he saw the train ahead of him on the track because of the failure of the air brakes to work.

In addition to deaths already recorded there are 6 unidentified and many fatally injured. Seventy people in all were hurt. The engine of the rear train telescoped the sleeper ahead and many were struck never to awake. Some were terribly mangled. Some animals escaped but were recaptured and one elephant was killed.

NORTHERN STARK COUNTY IS DEVASTATED BY A TERRIFIC STORM OF WIND AND HAIL

AL. DEIBEL IS PENITENT

Broke Down and Cried at Station as Friends Bade Him Adieu—Taken to Warren to Appear Before U. S. Commissioner.

Albert W. Deibel, alleged bank defaulter, was taken to Warren to be brought before United States Commissioner Gillmer by United States Deputy Marshal Sampson, of Cleveland, Friday morning. At the Pennsylvania depot, just before he left, the accused broke down and cried. Spectators were forced to turn their backs to conceal their feelings. Marshal Sampson had a suspicion of a tear in his eyes as he watched his prisoner.

Judge Albaugh, his counsel, held a conference with the accused in jail Friday morning. It is believed that an effort to have the bond reduced to $10,000 will be successful. If so, Deibel will be able to furnish it as he has the assurance of that amount from his friends. Thursday night he spent in the county jail, not being able to get the $25,000 bond fixed by Justice Bowman.

The prisoner broke down and cried as he was being led to jail by Chief McCloud, after the arraignment Thursday afternoon. A steady stream of visitors came to see him in prison among them his brother John F. H. Deibel, secretary of the Narwood Co. The prisoner was very nervous and wept often.

Probably the most pathetic incident connected with the affair occurred Thursday afternoon when the news of the arrest was broken to the father and mother of the accused. The parents of Deibel had been kept in ignorance of the trouble and it was not until about 3 o'clock Thursday that they were told of it. Both were nearly heartbroken. It was with difficulty that Mrs. Deibel was brought to believe the statements made. The evening papers first carried the details of the arrest and imprisonment to the father and mother.

Deibel lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Deibel, at 416 Rowland street. The house is a two story, unpretentious frame dwelling. John Deibel is a carpenter, a respectable and hard working man.

Crops Flailed to Pieces by the Heavy Hail Stones, Buildings Unroofed and Windows Smashed—Damage Cannot be Estimated.

John Fraley of Canton Has Miraculous Escape—His Horse Killed by Lightning—Farmers are Disconsolate Over Storm's Havoc.

The worst hail storm ever known swept over the northern part of Stark county about 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, killing stock, destroying forests and growing crops, and doing great damage to buildings. The path of the storm, so far as can be learned, was about a mile wide. It came from the northwest passing southeast through Lake, Marlboro, Nimishillen and Washington townships.

Heavy clouds loomed in the sky and rain began falling. The air was intensely hot, registering 90 degrees in the shade. After the rain began to fall the thermometer fell rapidly and the wind began to blow fiercely. It soon became a veritable cyclone and hail began falling. The hail stones were large and, driven by the wind, wrought great destruction. To add to the terror of the storm lightning flashed and the crashing thunder added to the roaring of the hail and wind.

HEAVY HAIL FELL. People living in the sections visited by the storm were almost panic stricken. The huge hail stones crashed through windows, destroyed crops, killed chickens, while the wind blew trees up by the roots, damaged roofs on buildings and scattered fences all over the country.

John Fraley, of Canton, had an exciting experience in the storm. He had driven to Greentown station on a hunting expedition, driving a horse belonging to Shertzer & Campbell. He placed the animal in the barn of Samuel Ryan and went into the woods. When the storm swept over that section, lightning struck the barn, killing the horse that Fraley had been driving and another one belonging to Ryan.

Fraley was in the woods and was compelled to lie upon his face in order to avoid serious injury from the hail, which was as large as hen's eggs and was driven with the speed of bullets by the wind. On all sides of him were falling trees and limbs and it was almost a miracle that he escaped.

CROPS ARE RUINED. In that section the corn, oats, vegetables of all kinds, fruit trees and everything of a destructible nature, was simply battered into the ground. Fruit and forest trees were uprooted, and carried by the fierce wind like straws.

In what is known as the Royer settlement north of Middlebranch, the storm did great damage. This is one of the richest celery growing districts in the county, and the hail simply cut the growing celery to pieces. David Royer owns a large greenhouse and every pane of glass in it was broken. The brick church in that settlement, had every pane of glass on the side next to the storm broken. Every house in the path of the storm suffered likewise. In many instances slate roofs were almost totally destroyed by the hail.

NORTH OF LOUISVILLE. John Marchand, who lives 4 miles north of Louisville, called at the News-Democrat office Friday morning and gave a graphic description of the storm in that section. It was about 2 o'clock when the rain began to fall, Mr. Marchand said. The heat was oppressive and the thermometer registered 90 degrees. After the storm it had fallen to 38.

The wind was a veritable cyclone. The hail in that section was of a peculiar shape, being as large as a dollar, but disc shaped. The discs were half an inch thick and sailed through the air like flat stones. When the hail began to fall it mercilessly pelted the cattle, sheep and hogs which were in the fields and they ran about bellowing, bleating and squalling in an effort to escape. Many chickens were killed, the hail literally beating the feathers off their bodies.

The gentleman stated that the storm at that point was a mile and a half wide. On his farm one half of his corn field was utterly destroyed, nothing being left except the stalks and ears, and the hawks were beaten off the ears. The other half of the field was not damaged to any extent. His oats, tomatoes, cabbage and garden truck were literally beaten into the ground. On the Youtzley and Whetstone farms the destruction was much greater than upon his own. Fruit trees were torn up by the roots and the woods and orchards look like they do in the fall after the leaves have fallen. One place he saw squashes that had been literally split in two by the hail.

LOSS IS IMMENSE. The ground was covered with hail and in some places it was piled up against the buildings almost two feet deep. It was so thick upon the ground any place that it could be shoveled up with a scoop shovel.

The loss in the county cannot be estimated. On scores of farms the entire corn crops were destroyed and minor crops of all descriptions were a total loss.

In Canton the only effects of the storm was the fall in temperature. Late in the afternoon it began to get cool and as the evening advanced people began to hunt heavier wraps. The coolness continued until Friday morning, when the sun warmed up the atmosphere to some extent.

WILD RUMORS ARE ABROAD IN WALL ST.

Decline in Values Affects the Big Moneyed Men—William C. Whitney is Hard Hit.

Scraps-McRae Telegram.

New York, Aug. 7.—The decline in security values in Wall street has caused losses reaching many millions and today it develops from trustworthy sources that many of the millionaires' accounts have been so hard hit that they were forced to seek assistance. In their efforts to fortify themselves they have been compelled to dispose of their choicest dividend paying securities.

The hurried return from Saratoga of W. C. Whitney, whose interest in his racing stables is intense, has provoked some stories which have brought flat-footed denials from financiers. Wall street has heard that in order to protect his holdings, Mr. Whitney at private sale had disposed of 20,000 shares of general electric on advance to J. P. Morgan. IMPORTED MOLDERS DESERT AULTMAN CO.

Local Strikers Follow Factory Official to Cincinnati and Persuade Men to Quit—Four Left Train at Mansfield.

The Aultman Co. has started an earnest campaign to obtain molders to take the places of the strikers. Advertisements have been inserted in a number of newspapers for young men who wish to learn brass or iron molding.

Edgar A. Wright, master mechanic at the Aultman works, went to Cincinnati several days ago to obtain a number of non-union men. He was successful in securing six men, but near Mansfield four of the men deserted after learning what the situation at the works was. It is said that a number of Canton molders followed Wright to Cincinnati and succeeded in getting the four men away by persuasion. The molders made no secret of the fact that they were tracing Wright and it is said they asked the men to quit in his presence.

Two of the men reached Canton but one refused to go to work while it is said the sixth man quit after working for a few hours. There are about six or eight men now in the molding department, but the company will make efforts to get a sufficient number of men to run the full foundry.

LIGHTHOUSE

A dispatch from Honolulu says: The proposal to establish a public park in or near the city as a memorial to the late President McKinley will probably be abandoned.

Instead of this tribute to the chief executive during whose administration the people of the United States, it is now planned to erect a McKinley memorial lighthouse at the entrance of Honolulu harbor.

This would be a prominent situation from both land and sea, besides being of great practical utility.

This project meets with much favor and is likely to be carried into effect.

CHILD TOLD THE STORY

Justice Spitzer's court room was crowded Thursday afternoon with spectators many from North Industry at the hearing of Charles Shortes charged with assaulting Jennie Ackleson, aged 9, daughter of William Ackleson, of that place. The child was accompanied by her mother, the father being absent. Shortes during the hearing, sat at the elbow of his counsel, R. S. Shields. He was extremely nervous and watched anxiously each witness.

There was a full in the courtroom when the little girl was placed upon the stand and told how Shortes had accosted her on the railroad track and attempted the crime. The story was told in a straightforward manner.

No witnesses for the defense were put on the stand and after hearing the evidence Justice Spitzer bound Shortes over to the grand jury. His bond was fixed at $80 which he was unable to furnish. He was taken to jail. During the hearing Attorney R. S. Shields and Attorney Kreighbaum, representing the prosecution, engaged in a heated argument and Shields threatened to leave the court room unless he was heard in his objection to certain statements made by the witness.
